Overview

Gymsports Management are committed to their mission of “Developing Friendly, Active and Responsible People”.

Gymsports Management have established strong Mens, Womens and Trampoline Team programs over the past 20 years, these programs have been highly competitive within this State and Nationally. Gymsports high performance programs are based on a holistic approach of athlete development that provides the opportunity for each athlete to achieve their potential.

Gymsports Management understands that being involved in a high-performance program requires far more than a skilled athlete. Being involved in a high-performance program requires the commitment and sacrifice not only of the athlete but of the financial and time resources of a whole family. This is not a commitment that Gymsports Management, athletes, families, and schools should make without considerable thought.

This document will outline all aspects of being involved in a high-performance program and will guide successful decision making for all parties.

Gymsports Management is committed to supporting athletes that have the development potential and necessary attributes to be a successful high-performance athlete on an international pathway of competitive men’s, women’s and trampoline gymnastics.

Goals of this policy

To clearly outline the commitment and the responsibilities of all parties involved in the development of a high-performance athlete.

To have clearly identified processes and pathways to support athletes and families in the decision making process of joining the high performance program.

To ensure all parties are focused on the same objective.

To implement an effective communication platform to ensure high performance policies, processes and review mechanisms are in place for informed contribution, decision making, transparency and awareness.

High Performance Programs

As identified by Gymnastics Australia and listed in the Gymnastics Australia High Performance review, a high-performance program is underpinned by six key areas:

Athletes

Coaching

Leadership and culture

Daily training environment

Competition

Knowledge and growth

The relationship between athlete, family, school and coach are a key factor in the success of a high-performance athlete.

Recognise and acknowledge the importance of clubs in the development and success of high-performance athletes.

Fundamental Movement Skills

Gymnastics is important for children: gymnastics plays a very important role in developing movement competence in children and developing skills for life across a wide range of sports. The development of confident and competent movers is an important outcome for physical education. Children who have developed competency in fundamental movement skills are far more likely to participate in sport and recreation throughout their life and will have reduced obesity risk. Positive links between fundamental movement skills and a child's social skills, self-esteem and academic performance.

Fundamental movement skills are about a child's ability to have an awareness of their body relative to their environment, to control their movements and to maintain or regain their balance. Gymnastics provides the programs to develop these core skills.

Skills such as balance, run, throw, kick, catch and leap are known as fundamental movement skills because they are required to participate proactively in a high number of physical activities.

Fundamental movement skills need to be practiced in order to master them.
